P R E F A C E.

THE present work, I have no hesitation in saying, will be found to stand alone, and unless much pain and labour have been wasted, it will be found I trust, to fulfil something more than the purposes of a trade catalogue—above and beyond a mere advertisement—convey some information and interesting facts connected with the Ceramic Art in general, and particularly respecting that branch with which I have been for the last thirty-five years most intimately connected—the justly far-famed Dresden Porcelain.

The mode in which Fine Art dealers have habitually acquired their Stock—by purchasing at auctions by various miscellaneous means peculiar to such a business—has prevented anything like a fair and just tariff ever having been attained. “To buy cheap, and sell dear,” might have been the motto of many a scrupulously honest dealer, while to those not burdened with conscience, this business has been a field in which largely to indulge a remunerative exaggeration, which only too often has deserved a more ugly term. To publish a Price List of Articles de Vertu has therefore been impossible, and doubtless with many purchasers, the knowledge of the fact that the objects of their admiration had a regular market value and were not absolutely unique, would have deterred them from collecting. The extraordinary concession, however, which by Royal favour has been especially granted to our House, eliminates this disadvantage, while conferring numerous and manifold opportunities on the amateur. The models illustrated will be found to include many of the finest specimens of modelling and colouring that the Meissen works have ever produced. The figures selected are mostly those of Joachim Kändler—undoubtedly the greatest modeller the Ceramic world has ever known; and the vases and other specimens have been selected with much thought, and it might not be invidious to add, after more than thirty-five years' business experience, with a matured judgment.

The Prices also will be found, it is hoped, an inducement never hitherto offered to those who with refined and elevated tastes lack the purse of a Fortunatus to gratify them, and in calling attention to the Terms enumerated on page 10, I think it will be readily acknowledged that they are liberal and advantageous.

THE ROYAL SAXONY MEISSEN PORCELAIN WORKS.

THE credit of what may be justly termed the second invention of the manufacture of Hard Porcelain belongs undoubtedly to Dresden. It is true that the Portuguese merchants had as early as the sixteenth century introduced Chinese porcelain very generally into Europe, but the mode of its production was perfectly secret, and was only discovered by a chemist's assistant named John Böttcher, at Dresden, in 1706, after many and futile experiments. The earlier specimens—now very rare, and called after their producer—were of a dark red colour, something like jasper, and were only ornamented by the gilders or silversmiths of that time. Later on, however, a fine white earth was discovered, out of which the first really fine Porcelain was manufactured. Augustus the Strong, Elector of Saxony, who has been termed the “King of China Maniacs,” took the greatest personal interest in this novel art, and to this Royal support we are indebted for many of the finest old specimens that now adorn the Gallery at Dresden. It is an historical fact that he presented William I., of Russia, with a regiment of dragoons, completely equipped, in return for twenty-two enormous vases, still to be seen in the Royal Collection at Dresden. Böttcher, the first director, died at the early age of thirty-seven, his death, Marryat tells us, being accelerated by intemperate living, and he was succeeded in office by Höroldt, in 1722, who introduced into the manufactory the intricate gilded borders and medallions, à la Chinese, by which that period is known. Höroldt's time is also distinguished by the swords (the mark of fabric) being smaller, and connected by the handles. In 1731, Kändler, whose name will live as long as there is such a thing as fame, superintended the modelling, and introduced wreaths, bouquets of flowers, chandeliers, vases, and animals. In an article on Dresden China, dated May 6th, 1876, The Queen newspaper says:—"A wonderful skill Kändler displayed in his Watteau figures. Cupid appears in at least a dozen different disguises (see Plate VII., Nos. 12, 13, 14), as a soldier with a pistol, as a pilgrim, as a Pole, &c. ; his shepherds, his gardeners, and courtiers, are charming (see Plate X., No. 22), and the heads of his monkey musicians (see Plate I., No. 1), are said to be caricatured likenesses of the Court orchestra." In none of his productions, however, was shown so keen a sense of humour as in those two interesting specimens—"Count Brühl's Tailor and Wife," (see Plate II., No. 2). We quote the anecdote from Marryat's "Pottery and Porcelain":—"Count Brühl, the profligate minister of Augustus III., whose splendid palace and terrace are the great ornaments of Dresden, was importuned by his tailor to be allowed to see the manufactory, admission to which was strictly prohibited. At length he consented, and the tailor upon his entrance was presented with the two last new pieces made, which were, one a grotesque figure—a portrait of himself, mounted upon a he-goat, with the shears and all the other implements of his trade (Plate II., No. 2),—and the other, his wife upon a she-goat (Plate II., No. 2), with a baby in swaddling clothes. The poor tailor was so annoyed with these caricatures that he turned back without desiring to see more. These pieces, known as Count Brühl's Tailor and Wife, are now much sought after from their historical interest." In commenting upon the different articles manufactured at Meissen, Marryat says, "The candelabra of this porcelain have never been equalled by any others. The taste displayed in the elegance of form in the figures and the ornamentation generally is unrivalled." "The Dresden flowers, the 'Lace' figures, and the Honeycomb and Mayflower vases are all of great beauty, and show the skill of the artists employed." These quotations, from an author who spent no inconsiderable part of his time and fortune in the study and collection of specimens of the Ceramic art, do justice to a manufactory which from ignorance has lately suffered from many a connoisseur's prejudice. Spurious wares, bearing a mark (the crossed swords), have been largely sold for genuine Dresden—partly through ignorance, and partly with bad intent, of many who have embarked in the Fine Art trade. In many cases within the writer's personal experience, where a piece of genuine modern Dresden has been sold, it has been represented and sold for a fine old specimen, as distinguished from the modern "Dresden," the term applied to the Fontainebleau, Hamburg, or Paris imitations. The Dresden manufactory is conducted on a large and liberal scale; its officers and workmen evince the greatest interest in their work, as those who have visited the factory will have remarked. It has its own Schools of Art, under Government protection, where students are trained for the work—and it is only due to the present directors, M. Raithel, and his lieutenant, M. Jähnichen, to add that the fame of their manufactory should never wane while the amour propre and esprit with which they animate their subordinates exist in the full vigour of the present time, and I have the greatest pleasure in testifying publicly, as I have often privately, to the many kindnesses and courtesies I have received from them in a business connection of over thirty years with the manufactory, and especially when the introduction of special models, or the carrying out of intricate designs entrusted to me, have called for their particular interest and zeal.

SAMUEL LITCHFIELD.

CABINET SPECIMENS FOR CONNOISSEURS.

Collectors of the old marks and monograms—as specimens of the extinct manufactories, and also of the earlier productions of Dresden, Sévres, Berlin, and other fabrics—will find a very large and interesting collection in three Show Rooms set apart for their arrangement. Of course it will be readily understood a personal selection of each piece is necessary, as no illustrations, however faithful, could sufficiently represent the special peculiarities of “paste,” colour, and other details that render them desirable. To meet the wishes, however, of customers at a distance, who may be unable to favour us with a visit, a small selection of the different marks will be sent “risk free,” upon application, enclosing banker’s reference. A list of the principal factories, together with a carefully prepared diagram of the marks and monograms by which they are distinguished, will be of interest to many readers; and with very few exceptions, one or more specimens are generally for disposal at moderate prices :—

The Numbers prefixed are for reference to Diagram of Marks. The Marks printed in Black represent those which are impressed in the paste. Those with an Asterisk (*) are found in Gold, as well as in Blue or Red; a Gold Mark is generally the sign of highest quality.

BUSINESS TERMS.

By a special arrangement with the Railway Company, we are enabled to send all fragile Goods to any part of Great Britain or Ireland RISK FREE; and should any article become damaged in transit, a full allowance will be made, or a perfect specimen sent, carriage free—provided that notice of such damage be given within three clear days.

All China will be packed Gratis, and this will be found a more solid advantage than Discount, which, as our Prices are calculated at fair and reasonable profits only, cannot be allowed. Where selections of articles for choice of presents are sent, however, and the customer elects to keep all sent, instead of choosing only one specimen—thereby saving the expense and risk of carriage of returns—a special Discount will be quoted. The promoters of Fancy Bazaars for charitable objects are requested to notice the advantage of this arrangement.

Every article will be fully invoiced, and guaranteed to be exactly as described; and as only genuine and worthy Goods are sold, any articles which may have been sold and paid for will be readily exchanged, if desired, for other Goods of same value—a slight per centage being charged for the trouble of re-entering and extra book-keeping.

All articles are marked in plain figures.

It is particularly requested that where Orders are not prepaid, reference to a Banker may be given.

RESTORATIONS OF OLD CHINA.

For the convenience of our patrons we undertake the restoration and repair of all China or Glass, however much broken, and assume full responsibility however valuable the articles may be. New heads, arms, hands, legs, and feet are modelled, or carved in ivory, and tinted and glazed to match the original colours ; and did our space permit, we could publish testimonials innumerable from customers absolutely astonished at the cleverness of our restorations.

Lord LONDESBOROUGH, 38, Berkeley Square.—“The Chelsea figures are wonderfully restored ; I had no idea new heads could be supplied.”

Sir RICHARD GLYN, Bart., Leweston, Sherbourne, Dorset.—“The repairs are wonderful.”

Mrs. HENRY ASTELL, Ichwell House, Biggleswade.—“All the repairs arrived safely, and I am very much obliged for the care and trouble bestowed.”

Mrs. BOWKER, Cross-in-Hand, Hurst Green.—“The repairs have come safely, thanks to good packing, and give great satisfaction.”

Major FITZGERALD, 9, Eaton Place South.—“Major Fitzgerald is much pleased with the way the hand of the figure has been modelled.”

Mrs. CHOLMONDELEY, Adlestrop Rectory, Chipping Norton.—“I am very much pleased with the way you have succeeded in repairing my Vienna dish.”

Mrs. WORMALD, Banwell Castle, Weston-super-Mare.—“I am much obliged for the pains taken in repairing my old China. I really cannot tell where it was broken.

Mrs. WESTON FULLERTON, Southern Hay, Bournemouth.—“I am quite astonished at the appearance of the blue bowl ; it is quite a marvel of repairing.”

—JACKSON, Esq., Inverness Terrace, Bayswater.—“You have repaired the Vase wonderfully. I did not believe the re-enamelling was possible.”

No. 1.—Dresden MONKEY ORCHESTRA. The illustration only shews 6 figures with Bandmaster. The complete sets consists of 18 figures besides the Bandmaster. These figures are specially alluded to by Marryat (see page 5), and form a grotesque and highly effective group. They may be very successfully mounted on little brackets attached to a velvet shield, for wall decoration, for which special designs may be had on application. Height of figures, 6 inches; Bandmaster, 6½ inches. Price, 10s. 6d.; Bandmaster, 12s. 6d.

The collection of fine Lace, of Crystale de Roche, and of silver enamel Bijouterie, has been found to involve a very considerable amount of capital, producing commercially an inadequate return. It is impracticable to illustrate these objects d'art, or publish any price list, but to connoisseurs who desire to add really fine specimens to their collections a rare opportunity is offered, as the whole of this collection, which has cost several thousand pounds, will be offered at cost price in order to realize and place the capital more advantageously. The accompanying illustration is of a Lace flounce—probably the finest specimen of Venice Point extant—purchased from an Italian palace, and forms part of this costly collection. Special terms would be quoted to the committees of museums or fine art clubs.
